The facts: An assistant Scoutmaster, Allan Boblitt, turned himself into police on morals charges March 5 apparently involving members of his Boy Scout troop. The story has been carried by Philadelphia papers and radio and television. Since then a former member of Exploring says in the period 1960-62 Boblitt, serving as an associate advisor, was kicked out of the post for similar activities. A computer check shows no record of this. Boblitt has been relieved of his assistant Scoutmaster duties in light of published stories and has not indicated any plans to appeal.
