Ex-Scoutmaster Pleads Guilty to Charges

By John Downey
Journal reporter

A former scoutmaster at Centenary United Methodist Church pleaded guilty yesterday to 23 counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor on allegations that he sexually abused four Boy Scouts from October 1977 to March 1984.

Under the terms of a plea bargain, Philippe Frederic Verheyen faces a maximum of 20 years in prison. But Judge Joseph R. John Jr. delayed sentencing until Thursday in Forsyth Superior Court.

Agent Frank D. Brown of the State Bureau of Investigation testified that church officials sent letters to the families of every child who had been a Scout in Verheyen's troop from 1973 to 1988, when Verheyen quit. Brown said he found two more men who said that they had been sexually abused by Verheyen. No charges were filed in those cases.

Verheyen went to another troop in 1988. An investigation turned up no allegations of abuse in that troop, Brown said.

But he said that such allegations had been made against Verheyen once before. He said that in 1975 church officials looked into allegations that Verheyen gave alcohol to some Scouts and abused them. Brown said that Verheyen threatened to sue the church, and the matter was dropped.

Brown said that, the first time he spoke to Verheyen in September, Verheyen admitted to having sexual contact with each of the four — now young men — who filed the charges.

"He said he had a problem and he wanted help," Brown testified.

Jane Verheyen, Verheyen's wife of eight years, grimaced and fought back tears as defense attorneys described how Verheyen told her and her 12-year-old son about the charges against him — and that they were true. She cried and lowered her head into her hand as attorney Teresa Bowden asked for leniency.

Verheyen, 38, of 3501 Tallison Drive, didn't look at the witnesses or the attorneys during the hearing. He stared straight ahead of the time with his hands folded in the table in front of him.

From time to time, he would press his eyes tightly closed, then return abruptly when he spoke to indicate the hearing's end did he emotion.

"I'm full of shame for what I have done," he said. "I beg the court to give me the opportunity to continue therapy that I need."

Four men who filed the charges had all been Scouts of Troop where Verheyen had been master from 1973 to 1988, said about conviction. None were in the courtroom yesterday.

Stakeman, a private attorney retained by the men after they went to Stop Child Abuse Now about Verheyen, assisted prosecutor Janet H. Branch with the case yesterday.

He said that the abuse began in 1977, and generally followed the same pattern with all four Scouts. The boys were between the ages of 11 and 14 when they were abused. Favored Scouts could earn the right to sleep in Verheyen's tent on camping trips, Stakeman said.

"Each woke to find Mr. Verheyen's hand in the boy's sleeping bag — inside the boy's pajamas or shorts," Stakeman said. He would fondle the boys, Stakeman said, and, in the morning, nothing would be said about the incident.

Defense witnesses testified that the abuse stopped in March 1984, after one of the boys called Verheyen by telephone a couple of days after such an incident. Dr. Robert W. Gibson, a psychiatrist, testified that the boy told Verheyen that he was not going to take such abuse anymore and that Verheyen had better stop.

According to the indictments, the boy was molested at least four times from March 1983 to March 1984.

Defense attorney S. Mark Rabitt contended that, after the phone call, Verheyen realized he was hurting the boys and stopped. Mrs. Branch argued that Verheyen was simply afraid that someone would complain to police and he would be arrested. Gibson treated Verheyen at a local psychiatric hospital for four weeks immediately after his arrest Sept. 28.

He said that Verheyen had been sexually abused by an older boy when he was 13 years old. He said it caused a conflict that Verheyen could not resolve because he felt victimized and at the same time felt close to the older boy. Gibson said that the abuse and a troubled family life, with a distant father and unsupportive mother, made it difficult for Verheyen to understand affection that did not involve sex.

"I think his primary motive was to be emotionally close to these boys and show them affection," he said.

Gibson and Dr. Timothy P. Foley said they believed that Verheyen could be successfully treated if he was able to participate in the proper therapy.

Defense attorneys asked for mercy and called character witnesses to testify about his 17 years with Integon General Insurance Corp. as well as his work with the UTA, the United Way and other volunteer organizations.

Mrs. Branch argued that an active prison sentence was required. "It happens again and again," she said, "that the person who holds himself out to the community as one who wants to help children is... looking to those children for something else."

Who's the fairest of them all? Certainly not Nanci Steinberg, a sophomore at the N.C. School of the Arts. Actually, Ms. Steinberg was striving for an unattractive appearance, as she practiced applying makeup to create an evil menacing guise during a class on stage makeup.

Sex-Scoutmaster Gets 5 Years on Sex-Abuse Charges

John Downey
JOURNAL REPORTER

Philippe F. Verheyen, a former scoutmaster who admitted to 23 counts of taking liberties with a minor, told a judge that he had been punished already in the media and by losing his job of 17 years in Oregon.

His defense attorneys asked on behalf of Verheyen's wife and two children that he be given a probationary sentence.

Judge Joseph R. John, presiding in Forsyth Superior Court, heard them out. He said that he weighed all of the arguments in Verheyen's favor against "the horrible abuse of the trust and confidence that the parents and children placed in him as a scoutmaster."

Then he sentenced Verheyen to a five-year active prison sentence. He added an additional 20 years in prison, but suspended that sentence on the conditions that Verheyen serve five years on probation, get psychiatric counseling, do 100 hours of community service and pay a $1,000 fine.

Verheyen closed his eyes and gripped a Bible as the judge passed sentence. The judge adjourned court. Verheyen kissed his wife, took a brown paper bag filled with clothes and other items from his sister, and walked out of the courtroom in the custody of the bailiffs.

Verheyen, 38, of 3501 Tallison Drive, was an assistant vice president at Integon General Insurance Corp. and had been the scoutmaster of Troop 920 at Centenary United Methodist Church from 1973 to 1988.

In September, he was arrested and charged with 23 counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor. When Verheyen pleaded guilty Monday, prosecutors said that from 1977 to 1984 Verheyen had allowed boys to sleep in his tent during camping trips and on some occasions had molested the boys by fondling their genitals or buttocks.

The incidents were discovered this summer when two of the former scouts, now young men, learned that they had had similar experiences with Verheyen and went to the police.

In a plea bargain with prosecutors, Verheyen agreed to plead guilty to all 23 counts, and prosecutors agreed that he would receive an active sentence of no more than 20 years. Defense attorney S. Mark Rabil said Monday.

A 27-year-old runner and athlete who was the MCA's director of health and fitness for three years died Wednesday after feeling ill for a week.

Valerie L. Ginter, of 1008 Turtle Rock Lane, died at 1 p.m., authorities said. Though hospital officials declined to tell the Journal the cause of death, Ginter's mother and roommate said that they were told she died of a blood clot.

Ms. Ginter coordinated all the classes taught at the Y, overseeing a staff of 30. She taught classes in aerobics, weight management and senior fitness, and coordinated all the road races the Y sponsored, said Kris Gardner, the Y's communications director.

Ms. Ginter had felt bad for a week, said her roommate. Aches lay that Verheyen admitted to the accidents but said that they stopped in 1984. Witnesses testified that a child who had been abused called Verheyen a few days after an incident in 1984 and told him that he would not allow that to happen again.

Rahil argued that Verheyen stopped because he realized then that he was hurting the boys. Prosecutor Brett H. Branch said that he stopped because he feared exposure. The names of the victims were not used in any of the hearings either Monday or yesterday.

Defense attorney Teresa Bowden argued yesterday that Verheyen's wife and two children would be hurt the most if Verheyen was sent to prison. She said that the family would lose its financial support.

More important, she argued, the therapy that the mother and children need to cope with the shock of the charges against Verheyen would be seriously impaired if Verheyen could not be with them.

Verheyen himself asked for mercy. "I have been punished for the last six weeks through the media — through television, through radio, through the newspaper," he said. "I am very sorry for what I have done. I will very soon live with that the rest of my life."

He said that he lost his job and probably any prospects for any such job ever again. "I have always been told that justice is blind. That it is above the issues of the press, the issues of politics," he said. "I trust that you will be today."

John said in court that he took very seriously the evidence that Verheyen had been involved in no such activity for more than five years, that the psychiatrist testified that there was hope for him in therapy, and that

Emergency workers arrived and tried to revive her, then took her to

"Those people at Forsyth were absolutely incredible, absolutely great," Ms. Atkins said. "They were torn up by it, too. It is devastating."

Doctors at Forsyth performed an autopsy on Ms. Gintner's body yesterday. Ms. Atkins described the cause of death as a roving blood clot that attacks around the heart.

"She was going up and down with this thing," Ms. Atkins said. "She'd have bad days and good days. The clotting moved around, and each time it moved up, she'd suffer. That last time, it blocked all the oxygen to her heart and lungs, and she just couldn't recover."

GREENVILLE — Waving signs and chanting "E.C.U.," more than 1,500 people marched from East Carolina University to City Hall yesterday to give city officials petitions protesting new noise restrictions.

The petitions ask the City Council to reconsider a recent decision to abolish a permit system that allows groups to exceed noise limits set by the city's noise-control ordinance.

The march and petition drive were organized by students of ECU who say that the new restrictions could mean the end to outdoor parties and concerts.

Officials at the N.C. Division of Health Services had drafted a proposal for the commission that would have kept only nine to 15 anonymous-testing sites in the state.

But they deleted the proposal from the draft of new regulations yesterday after pressure from the governor and lieutenant governor.

George Rudy, a deputy secretary of the Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources, told the commission, "His (Martin's) request is that you do not undermine the clear intent of the legislature."

Karen A. Morrison, an assistant to Lt. Gov. James C. Gardner, agreed, saying that Sen. Joseph E. Johnson, D-Wake, the chairman of the Senate Judiciary committee, understood that HIV infection be treated like any other communicable disease.

Scoutmaster Is Charged in Sex-Offense Case

Dan Chapman
JOURNAL REPORTER

An assistant vice president of the International General Insurance Corp. who is also scoutmaster in the Boy Scouts was arrested yesterday and charged with 23 counts of sexually molesting boys.

The State Bureau of Investigation charged Philippe Frederic Verheyen, 38, with a minor. Verheyen, who lives at 01 Tullison Drive in Winston-Salem, is charged with molesting four boys on a number of occasions between October 27 and March 1984, according to arrest warrants filed at the Forsyth County Hall of Justice.

The four boys, who were less than 16 years of age at the time, are now adults. Sources close to the investigation said that in the case started when some of the boys, who are still friends, were discussed and what happened to them while they were Boy Scouts. Eventually, they decided to tell the police.

According to the sources, Verheyen led his troops on overnight, weekend and summer camping trips to places in North Carolina and even to the Philmont Scout Ranch in New Mexico. The four men have said that they were molested during those trips, the sources said.

Verheyen has been a scoutmaster or assistant scoutmaster with the Old Hickory Council of the Boy Scouts of America since 1973, said Harold T. Murray Jr., the council's executive.

Murray said in a prepared statement: "Mr. Verheyen has been suspended from any relationship with the Boy Scouts of America pending the outcome of the investigation."

Murray also said that Verheyen was the scoutmaster of Troop 920 until 1987. Troop 920 is sponsored by the Centenary United Methodist Church. Since 1987, Verheyen was the assistant scoutmaster for Troop 770, which is sponsored by Murray would not elaborate on why Verheyen switched from one Boy Scout troop to another.

"It was for personal reasons," he said. "It's not unusual for someone to quit a volunteer position then ... come back in (with another troop)."

Warren Sparrow, the district attorney in Forsyth County, said that the cases will be tried here because the victims are from Forsyth County, even though they said that they were molested elsewhere. He cited a state statute that says that, if a defendant transports victims from one place to another with the intent to commit a sex crime, "the defendant may be tried in the county where the transportation was offered, solicited, begun, continued or ended."

Turner Coley, a spokesman for Integon, said that Verheyen is an assistant vice president for Integon General Insurance Corp., which is a subsidiary of Integon Corp.

Verheyen was suspended with pay yesterday afternoon pending the outcome of the investigation, Coley said.

Verheyen was released on a $23,000 bond.

Journal reporter John Downey contributed to this story.

Ex-Boy Scout Leader Is Indicted in Molestation Case

By Dan Chapman
JOURNAL REPORTER

The grand jury in Forsyth County indicted a former Boy Scout leader yesterday on 23 counts of sexually molesting four boys.

The indictments say that Philippe Frederic Verheyen, 38, took indecent liberties with the boys between October 1977 and March 1984. Verheyen, who lives at 3501 Tullison Drive in Winston-Salem, was arrested Thursday and released on a $23,000 bond.

The four boys, who are now adults, said that they were molested while on Boy Scout camping trips, according to sources close to the investigation. The boys were between the ages of 11 and 14, according to the indictments. One of the boys was molested a number of times between the ages of 11 and 13, the indictments say.

All the boys were members of Troop 920, sponsored by Centenary United Methodist Church. Verheyen was a scoutmaster of that troop until he switched to another troop in 1987, said the Rev. George P. Robinson, the senior minister at Centenary.

"He was an able leader of scouting," Robinson said. "As a matter of fact, he came to us recommended by the scouting organization as an outstanding prospect. Of course we are all just stunned and heartbroken by this whole thing. Devalued might be a better word." Harold T. Murray, the executive f Old Hickory Council of the Boy Scouts of America, said Thursday that Verheyen has been suspended from scouting.

Turner Coley, a spokesman for the Integon Corp., where Verheyen worked, said last week that Verheyen was suspended with pay pending the outcome of the investigation. Verheyen, who was an assistant vice president of the Integon Life Insurance Co., a subsidiary of Integon, was also looking for another job when the charges were filed.

"He was involved in a project that was phased out early in September," Coley said yesterday. "He was, in fact, in transition to employment elsewhere." Coley declined to elaborate. For the past few months, Verheyen has been assisting Martha S. Wood's campaign for mayor as a member of her Business Advisory Committee.

Detectives with the State Bureau of Investigation continued to work on the case yesterday, said W. Eld Hunt of the SBI. "If there are other victims, I would hope that they would come forward," he said. But Hunt said that he doesn't know whether there were other victims or if another adult may have been involved.

Although Verheyen was charged in Forsyth County, the SBI has jurisdiction in the case because the camping trips occurred in various parts of the state and in New Mexico, sources said. But Warren Sparrow, the district attorney in Forsyth, said that Verheyen will be tried here.
