Ashville Council member resigns for personal reasons

By JEFF BREHM
Herald Assistant Editor

Ashville Village Council member Ralph Gloyd, 56, resigned his post Monday during the regular village council meeting.

Council went into a closed-door executive session immediately after roll call opened the meeting. Councilman Don Forquer was absent.

Approximately 25 minutes after the council, Mayor Marvin Hicks and the council clerk left the room, Gloyd returned. He put on his coat, picked up his notebook and left the Hosier Memorial Building without comment.

Council returned to open session a few minutes later and spent more than two hours discussing other items on its agenda before reaching the end of its meeting. Hicks then left the room and returned with a small, yellow sheet of paper, from which he read what he said was Gloyd's resignation, dated that day.

"I, Ralph Gloyd, resign from Ashville Village Council for personal reasons," Hicks read.

Village officials offered no other comment on the resignation. Gloyd, of 85 Cromley St., Ashville, recently pleaded guilty in Pickaway County Common Pleas Court to a charge of gross sexual imposition.

The Herald contacted the Pickaway County Prosecutor's office late this morning, but details of the case were not available at press time.

After Hicks read Gloyd's resignation, a council member asked if a vote was needed. Councilman Frank Welsh said council had already voted that evening to accept the resignation, but Hicks noted the Ohio Sunshine Law, or Open Meetings Law, listed as Chapter 121.22 of the Ohio Revised Code, does not permit votes during executive sessions.

"Okay, we'll make it official then," said Councilman Albert Johnston.

I could not (compare) the figures to Johnson's bid."

Johnston said Johnson Disposal bid a flat rate, which would not change as state fees for trash haulers were imposed under the new solid waste laws. Rumpke, he said, bid on a sliding scale which would vary according to the solid waste fees.

"Re-advertising won't accomplish a thing," Johnston said. "I do not feel Johnson has a bad bid."

"The question is, do we want to handle this or do we want to forget it? If you want to forget it, fine, (but) don't re-advertise this and go through this again."

A long debate ensued between representatives of both trash firms over whether Rumpke had submitted a bid as required in the advertised specifications. Welsh and Hosier clashed over whether the franchise should include provisions for commercial and industrial customers, instead of just the residential customers in the proposed contract.

After lengthy debate, council voted 4-0 to award a five-year contract to Johnson Disposal, at a cost to the village of $3.65 per customer per month. The Rumpke officials promptly left the meeting.

Johnson representatives said they would be contacting village businesses to set up trash collection agreements.

Discussion then turned to the village's surcharge for handling the trash billing along with the water and sewer accounts. After some debate, council voted to accept Welsh's recommendation of a surcharge of 85 cents per month, making the monthly rate to customers a total of $6.50.

Welsh said the surcharge would generate approximately $44,000 over the five years of the contract. The funds remaining after paying the clerical costs of trash billing will be earmarked for street paving and repairs, Welsh and Johnston said.

In other action Monday, council:

- Heard a report from Village Engineer John Grosse that Gemini Construction, the firm working on the north end sewer project, will halt installation of new main lines and concentrate on street repairs and installing smaller service lines.

Grosse said all other portions of the project will be completed before the firm starts laying lines along Station Street. He said that work will probably start in early December.

- Heard a report from Hicks that a proposed Community Development

Block Grant (CDBG) will be used for storm sewer improvements on Hall Street, South Street and nearby alleys. He said the project would not get underway until spring if the grant is approved.

- Heard a report from developer Mark Leatherwood on a planned split in the Ashville Community Center project, located along village's far west side.

- Discussed plans to erect 5 speed limit signs along streets where sewer lines are under construction and heard from Police Chief Chuck Wise that ticketed motorists have been ticketed for trying to drive through streets closed for the project.

- Voted to advertise for big insurance.

- Adopted an ordinance establishing fees for the four-city solid waste management district.

- Voted to permit rental of the shelter house during the cold winter, on a trial basis.

- Discussed plans to create a village employee position, primarily for groundskeeping duties.

- Approved a leave of absence for Johnston.

The next regular council meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 20 at the Hosier Men's Building. The meeting is open to the public.
